

GOOD COMMUNITY HOUSE BENEFITS

Distinct Pleasure Experienced by People of Neighborhood in Owning Buildings.

MANY VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS

Structure Should Be Large Enough to Serve Needs of Every Organization, and Should Be Located Conveniently.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A community can "live around" from church building to church building from schoolhouse to schoolhouse, from hall to hall, from long to long, but it will never experience the distinct pleasure that comes from occupying a home of its own in the form of a community house.

Good community houses adds something to the life of the community, in the opinion of specialists at the United States Department of Agriculture, set forth in Farmers' Bulletin 1173, "Plans for Rural Community Buildings," now ready for distribution.

Before a community decides the question of erecting a building, says this bulletin, it should make a careful study of the local situation. The study should show that an actual need for the building is felt by the varied organizations of a public nature and by the people themselves. It should demonstrate that the building can and should be maintained as a permanent institution. After it has decided to erect a building numerous questions arise, upon which the bulletin gives much helpful information and many valuable suggestions, together with pictures and floor plans of a wide variety of community buildings now in actual use.

Make Survey of Community Needs.

The original study, it is pointed out, should not only determine the need of a community building, but also the most desirable type. The bulletin advises that the building be large enough to serve the present needs of every member of the community and every organization, regardless of party, creed, or class, no matter how far distant they may be and should be located at a place naturally frequented by all members of the community.

For this reason, if for no other, they are highly interesting additions to the summer things for country and town wear. Then they are cool to wear and in most instances they can be washed, so that they combine many attributes in one.

"In the first place they come quite uninvited. Now, when one is very good friends with an insect or a fly, it is all right for that insect or fly to come and call or to have a meal quite uninvited."

"But when one isn't friendly in the least with a creature it is a good deal for that creature to be around and more free visit any time he feels inclined to have it."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

CARRIE CATECHY.

"Do you know why we are so rude?" asked Carrie Catechy of old Witty Witch.

"I'd like to know," said Witty Witch. "You see, I've been asked so often by some of the fairies, and I'd like to tell them if you have any reason for treating the flies as you do."

"As a matter of fact you are no more rude than I am. You're pretty mean to the flies."

"To be sure, flies aren't healthy, but I don't suppose they do you any harm. And insects, too! How rude you are to insects. Do tell me why," urged Witty Witch.

"Of course we're rather cunning little flowers, and our clusters are very pretty. Some of our cousins are in color, but we like the bright colors," said Carrie Catechy.

"Some of our garden relatives are purple in color, too, and some are a rose pink shade."

"Our stems or stalks are thin and, of course, our blossoms, our dear little blossoms, are very sticky."

"They are," agreed Witty Witch. "And yet no one would think so. They are really very sticky indeed, and yet, to look at you, one would think you'd wear a sticky rock."

"But it isn't sticky and dirty," said Carrie Catechy. "It is sticky on purpose."

"We don't wear a sticky rock, but we wear pretty blossoms. Still, we must have our clothes clean—a nice, clean kind of stickiness," Carrie Catechy laughed.
